HR.com, the leading community and resource hub for HR professionals, is excited to announce the formation of a new State of Rewards and Recognition Advisory Board. This distinguished group of experts will drive advancements in rewards and recognition practices, tools, services, and processes, helping HR professionals and organizational leaders achieve excellence in employee engagement and talent management into 2025.

The advisory board will work in close collaboration with HR.com's HR Research Institute (HRRI) to conduct groundbreaking primary research and share actionable insights. Their collective expertise will shape thought leadership, best practices, and innovative strategies to meet the evolving needs of the HR industry.

The research findings from this initiative will be published in a comprehensive report offering detailed insights and recommendations. Additionally, a condensed two-page infographic will provide a quick reference for key points. The upcoming virtual event will include a day of informative sessions from a variety of subject matter experts in this area.
